

Lunar Corona over Cochem Castle

Image Credit & Copyright: Babak Tafreshi (TWAN)

This bat-like apparition does not shine on clouds passing over Gotham city. Instead, the cloud bank in silhouette against a colorful lunar corona was spotted on the evening of May 18 over Cochem, Germany from the banks of the river Moselle. The lunar corona is formed as bright moonlight is diffracted by water droplets in thin clouds drifting in front of the lunar disk. Below it lies the region's historic Cochem Castle dating from the 11th century, and not Wayne Manor. Still, regardless of your location on planet Earth it is well worth scanning the evening skies this weekend, as a Full Moon rises and bright planets gather in the west.

NASA and Meet & Greet Videoconferences

On the May, 17.2013 the students of ABiS-School for child from Poland took part in the next Meet&Greet Videoconference under PSSP- Europe Project. Their partner from Kurtkoy Doga College (Kurtkoy, Istanbul) had a chance to watch and listen to a few presentations about Poland. Our students prepared some posters during project classes in order to present them to our Turkish partner. At the end of the videoconference both sides exchanged information from their daily life and the topic of music soon became the beloved one. No wonder the meeting finished with common singing again! :-)

Thank you to both schools to arrange such a lovely videoconfernece.
